

Learning Outcomes for CS&IS Certificate Programs

The Certificate programs from the Department of Computer Science and Information Systems provides preparation for students to:

- write computer projects using at least two programming languages and/or applications.
- gain experience with networks or databases as appropriate to the particular certificate program.
- communicate effectively with written reports.
- obtain employment in a computer-related field.