

The program learning outcomes for a Masters in History are as follows:

General Goals:

- Students will demonstrate the mastery of the historians' skills of research, analysis and writing and employ them in a variety of forms (analytical, historiographic and bibliographic essays, and research papers or theses.
- Students will demonstrate the understanding and the mastery of European, American and/ or World Historiography.
- Students will demonstrate the recognition and mastery intercultural relationships and change over time.
- Students will demonstrate the ability to distinguish and utilize primary and secondary sources.
- Students will demonstrate the ability to critique and analyze the works of other historians, past and present.

Applied History Goals:

- Students will demonstrate the ability to translate traditional historical scholarship into media meant for non-professional audiences.