

The program learning outcomes for a Masters in Social Work are as follows:

- Prepare students to apply the generalist practice perspective to advanced social work practice using a strengths-based empowerment orientation with diverse client populations and social service delivery systems;
- Develop an understanding of causal factors such as oppression, poverty, racism, and discrimination that influence social and economic justice among diverse client groups;
- Develop an understanding of diversity that promotes competent practice in the areas of social work assessment, planning, practice and research;
- Promote the development, integration and incorporation of core values and ethics of the social work profession into advanced practice; and
- Establish an understanding of how the implementation of program evaluation and research are used to advance a cost effective, accountable environment in social service agency settings.